JIN Criminal History Query (CHQ)

The Steering Committee met today to discuss customer requirements. Plans are coming together to establish a workable model that serves both state and local entities. A draft requirements report is expected next week. We will also discuss next week how work already done by the Law Enforcement Support Agency to interface with the state criminal history repository may be leveraged.

We also conducted a design review with DIS on Monday and a follow-on “whiteboard session today. Both sessions were extremely productive and set the grounds for meaningful collaboration.

Summary Offender Profile (SOP)

Templar provides portions of the SOP source code for us to evaluate its utility in the development of the CHQ product. I have passed these on to the Online Project Team and will report back next week.

I also received some positive feedback from one of the pilot users from DOC, who has continued to use the application and derive benefits from it. I have begun to explore a further rollout to DOC with one of the field offices for whom I presented the application before Thanksgiving. In addition I will make a presentation to a group of users from the Attorney General’s office next week.

Electronic Citations

Representatives of the WSP have informed me that because my proposal deviates from the original, the funds will have to be re-authorized by the Emergency Management Division (EMD). I do not believe that this is the case and have asked for clarification from EMD.

I have also set up a meeting for AOC representatives with Carrie Tellefson, the new legislative liaison for DIS, to discuss issues related to statutory changes needed to abolish signature requirements for citations.
